Legal Notice

Last updated: October 2026

The DiplomAtlas website (the “Site”) is published by the DiplomAtlas association, a non-profit association governed by the French law of 1 July 1901 on associations, registered in the French National Directory of Associations (RNA) under number W751280432, whose registered address is 66 avenue des Champs-Élysées, 75008 Paris, France.

DiplomAtlas is an independent documentation, analysis and visualization platform dedicated to international relations, diplomatic positions and geopolitical developments. Its purpose is to make information drawn from public, institutional and documentary sources accessible, understandable and comparable.

Publication is managed by the DiplomAtlas team.

All correspondence relating to the Site may be sent to: contact@diplomatlas.com

Publishing and editorial responsibility

DiplomAtlas designs and publishes content for informational, documentary, educational and analytical purposes.

The information published on the Site results from the collection, selection, contextualization, verification and formatting of sources that are publicly available or made accessible by institutions, governments, international organizations, diplomatic missions, courts, administrations, public bodies or recognized documentary sources.

DiplomAtlas endeavors to distinguish, as far as possible, the content of original sources from any analysis made of them.

Where a piece of information, a classification, a graphic representation or a characterization results from interpretation, it should be understood as reflecting DiplomAtlas’s own methodology and not as the reproduction of an official position of the State, institution or organization concerned.

DiplomAtlas remains solely responsible for its editorial choices.

Institutional independence

DiplomAtlas is an independent initiative.

Unless expressly stated otherwise, DiplomAtlas does not act in the name or on behalf of any State, government, ministry, embassy, international organization, public administration or other official institution.

The presence on the Site of a name, logo, flag, statement, document, institution, public official or diplomatic mission shall not be construed as implying any affiliation, partnership, accreditation, support, funding or official endorsement.

Likewise, the fact that a source is cited or referenced by DiplomAtlas does not mean that DiplomAtlas endorses all the positions or opinions expressed therein.

Sources, method and updating of information

DiplomAtlas places particular importance on the quality, traceability and date of the sources it uses.

The content of the Site may draw in particular on publications issued by national authorities, ministries, international organizations, diplomatic missions, public institutions, courts, parliaments, official gazettes, press releases, treaties, agreements, public databases or recognized documentary works.

DiplomAtlas’s methodology is based on identifying and cross-checking the sources available at a given date.

All information should therefore be assessed in light of its context and date of publication.

As international relations, diplomatic positions and public policies are subject to change, information that is accurate at a given time may become partial, incomplete or outdated following a new statement, a change in doctrine or the publication of a subsequent act.

DiplomAtlas takes reasonable care to keep its content up to date, but cannot guarantee instantaneous updating of the entire platform.

Where a clarification or correction appears necessary, DiplomAtlas reserves the right to modify, supplement or update any published content.

Analyses, classifications and reading tools

DiplomAtlas may develop classifications, categories, indicators, levels of analysis, timelines or visual representations intended to facilitate the understanding of complex diplomatic data.

These tools are part of its own editorial methodology.

They do not constitute an official decision, a legally binding characterization, or a statement attributable to any government or institution, except where it is expressly stated that an element reproduces an official source.

Where a matter is of particular importance, users are invited to consult directly the original sources to which DiplomAtlas refers.

The methodological rules applicable to classifications and reading tools may be presented separately in the “Methodology” section.

Cartography

The maps provided on DiplomAtlas serve information and visualization purposes.

Unless expressly stated otherwise, the geographical representations used on the Site shall not in themselves be construed as a legal or diplomatic position on the status of a territory, the delineation of a border, sovereignty over an area, the recognition of an entity or the resolution of an international dispute.

Map data may rely in particular on services, libraries or databases provided by third parties.

Maps should be read together with the sources, legends, explanatory notes and methodology that accompany them.

Status of published information

DiplomAtlas is a documentary and analytical platform.

The information published on the Site is in no way a substitute for official texts, court decisions, treaties, international agreements, administrative acts, government communications, institutional publications or other authentic documents issued by a competent authority.

In the event of any discrepancy between a presentation published on DiplomAtlas and an official document, the content of the original official document shall prevail.

Nor does the content made available on the Site constitute individualized legal, diplomatic, financial, political or professional advice.

Translations

DiplomAtlas may provide translations of documents, statements, press releases or other sources written in a foreign language.

Unless otherwise stated, these translations are provided for information purposes only and are not official.

In the event of any divergence of interpretation, the original version published by the authority or institution concerned remains the reference.

Corrections and right to report

DiplomAtlas attaches particular importance to the accuracy of its content.

Any person, institution, administration, embassy, diplomatic mission or organization that considers information published on the Site to be factually incorrect, incomplete or outdated may request that it be reviewed.

Any request should, where possible, specify the page concerned and be accompanied by a source or document enabling the request to be assessed.

Reports may be sent to contact@diplomatlas.com.

Receipt of a report does not automatically result in a modification of the content concerned. Each request is examined in light of the available sources, DiplomAtlas's methodology and its editorial independence.

Intellectual property

The Site, its structure, architecture and presentation, as well as the original content created by DiplomAtlas, may be protected by national, European and international intellectual property laws.

This protection may extend in particular to the DiplomAtlas name, its visual identity, logo, texts, analyses, classifications, methodologies, databases, documentary fact sheets, visualizations, graphics, original maps and, more generally, any content developed specifically for the platform.

Any reproduction, representation, adaptation, publication, extraction or reuse must respect the rights of DiplomAtlas and any rights held by third parties.

Consulting the Site does not entail any assignment or general license to exploit the content accessible on it.

Short quotations made in compliance with applicable law remain permitted, provided they are clearly attributed to DiplomAtlas and preserve the meaning and context of the content quoted.

Databases

Databases developed or compiled by DiplomAtlas may benefit from the protection provided by the French Intellectual Property Code.

Any extraction or reuse of a substantial part of their content, as well as any repeated or systematic extraction likely to harm the normal exploitation of the database, may be subject to prior authorization.

Third-party rights

DiplomAtlas may reproduce or reference documents, data, logos, maps, photographs, emblems, trademarks or other elements belonging to third parties.

These elements remain the property of their respective owners and remain subject to the rules applicable to them.

Any person who believes that content available on the Site infringes a right they hold may contact DiplomAtlas at contact@diplomatlas.com, precisely identifying the content concerned and substantiating the right claimed.

Links to third-party websites

The Site may contain links to institutional, governmental, academic, media or documentary websites operated by third parties.

These links are mainly intended to provide access to sources or additional information.

DiplomAtlas exercises no general control over the content or operation of these websites and cannot be held responsible for their availability, accuracy, security or practices.

Liability

DiplomAtlas takes reasonable care to ensure the reliability of the information it publishes.

However, given in particular the evolving nature of sources and diplomatic positions, no guarantee of absolute completeness or continuous updating can be given.

Subject to applicable mandatory provisions, DiplomAtlas cannot be held liable for any unintentional factual error, omission, subsequent change in information, unavailability of an external source, temporary interruption of the Site or misinterpretation of information by a user.

Each user remains responsible for the use they make of the content accessible on the platform.

Artificial intelligence and technical tools

In the course of its activities, DiplomAtlas may use technical tools or automated systems designed to facilitate certain research, translation, extraction, comparison, classification or data-structuring operations.

The use of these tools does not confer any particular authority on them and does not transfer DiplomAtlas’s editorial responsibility.

Published content remains the responsibility of DiplomAtlas.

Personal data

DiplomAtlas may process certain personal data in connection with the operation of the Site, in particular when a user creates an account, makes contact, requests a correction or uses certain services.

Such processing is carried out in accordance with the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) and applicable French legislation.

Information on the purposes of processing, legal bases, retention periods, data recipients and the rights of data subjects is set out in the Privacy Policy accessible from the Site.

Any request relating to personal data may be sent to contact@diplomatlas.com.

Cookies

The Site may use cookies and other trackers to ensure its operation, improve its performance or measure its audience.

Where regulations require the user’s consent, the trackers concerned are only placed after the user has expressed their choice.

The terms applicable to cookies and other trackers are set out in a dedicated policy accessible from the Site.

Governing law

This legal notice is governed by French law.

Any issue relating to the interpretation or use of the Site shall be assessed in accordance with the applicable laws and regulations.
